1.2 Clear space

When using the logo in a design or placing it next to other visual elements, you should ensure that it has plenty of room to breathe. This is where clear space and margins come in to play.

The logo's clear space defines the distance between the logo and any graphic element it may be sitting next to in a composition. Use the cap height from the word mark as a reference for the appropriate amount of space.

Clear space = X = Wordmark height/2

Logo on grey and white:
The logo may be used as all grey on white or all white on grey.

1.5 Logo & Tagline

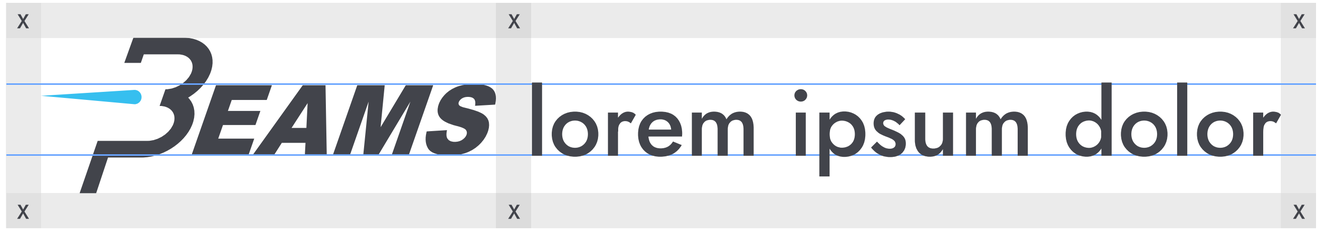

Whenever the logo and tagline are used together, follow the same grid as the clear space lock-up.

The text size of ‘xxxx’ is defined by the X-height of the logo.

The vertical logo and tagline lock-up is our default option.
The tagline has to be positioned inside the lower margin, with an X offset to the right starting from the lower part of the Beta Symbol

However, when working with small heights, use the horizontal alternative.
